Jakub Hošek draws upon a wide range of influences when constructing his paintings. Made by using acrylic paint applied meticulously onto the canvas using hand-cut stencils of masking tape, Hošek's paintings have been described as being illustrative, appearing to describe a complex narrative in a single comic-strip-like frame. It is precisely this spirit of post-teenage pop, contemporary postpunk and punkrock music that defines Hošek's strongly coloured and, through its collage-like comic elements, deliberately naive painting – stylish, cool and technically perfect.
